Flexible Working Seminar

Meeting the challenge - 29th April 2008

With the Government's extension to the current flexible working legislation being almost inevitable, HR will continue to be at the forefront of helping their organisations embrace flexible working.

We have joined together with Purple House to co-host a FREE seminar on Tuesday 29th April at Marsh Farm Hotel, Swindon which will focus on assisting HR to meet this key challenge. This seminar aims to show how HR can adopt a more proactive approach to flexible working.

The seminar will include:

- Promoting the positive experiences some organisations have had as a result of embracing flexible working practices and to act as a reminder of the increasingly well documented business benefits in doing so
- Identifying the range of flexible working options in the workplace
- Suggestions as to how HR can help their businesses meet the challenges of flexible working going forward
- Provide an update on the legislative aspects of flexible working, the likely outcome of the Government review and the exposure of employers to indirect sex discrimination claims
- A discussion of the issues expected to shape flexible working in the future.

Speakers:

Matt Jenkin – partner and head of the Thames Valley employment team at Morgan Cole. Matt regularly advises employers on all aspects of flexible working including: dealing with requests for flexible working; the impact of requests on terms and conditions of employment; and defending claims in the employment tribunal arising out of rejected requests for flexible working.

Lindsey Newman - the founder of Purple House, a recruitment consultancy specialising in the field of Human Resources who find talented HR professionals for all sizes and sectors of organisation. Lindsey is in a position to understand the difference that good flexible working practices can make to businesses seeking to attract, recruit and retain good people as well as having an insight into what employees are looking for from their employers in terms of flexibility.

Registration is from 8.45am, for a 9am start. Breakfast will be available and we aim to be finished by 11am
